

ABSTRACT

In this invention, a new structure for the units using a series of moving beds, characterized by a direct supply of regenerated catalyst from at least two of the reactors of the series, is described. The feedstock and the intermediate effluents continue to circulate in succession relative to the reactors. The invention makes it possible in particular to cross a new threshold in the reduction of the operating pressure of the units.